

SECTION 12

Risk Management and Self-Insurance Premiums

12.1 Agency self-insurance premiums decision packages

Risk management is a key strategy for reducing costs and improving outcomes Risk management refers to the practices an organization uses to manage its risks. The discipline considers environmental, strategic, operational, and financial risks across the organization. It includes identifying, measuring, prioritizing, and responding to risk. Managing risk should be integrated with planning and operational processes and should be part of each decision making process. Each agency needs to understand the strategic risks it faces, and to decide how its risks should be managed. The budget submittal offers a means for agencies to describe their risk management strategies.

Self-insurance premiums will be budgeted through decision packages Agency self-insurance premiums will continue to be budgeted as a distinct line item at either the maintenance or performance level. This approach enhances the oversight of agency loss trends and improves strategies to mitigate future losses. Agencies with past and potential future loss experience as the primary driver of their premium increase are to prepare a performance level decision package. Agencies with less frequent and less severe losses are to complete a maintenance level decision package.

OFM will notify agencies about which type of decision package to submit

Later in the spring, OFM will notify agencies indicating the incremental change in the agency's self-insurance premiums for 2005-07 and whether the agency should prepare a maintenance or performance level decision package for this amount.
